COMPREHENSION

Read the following passage and answer the questions that follow:

A quarter past one now struck, and the bell began ringing for lunch, so they went into the hall and took their places, Tom at the very bottom of the second table, next to Jones, who sat at the end to keep order, and East a few places away. The roll-call was called first, and then lunch began. Tom looked at the boys around him; some were reading, some throwing small pieces of bread, and the rest talking to one another in low voices. Tom had a good lunch. After lunch East asked Tom if he would like to go and see the school field, which he was very glad to do.

'That's the chapel you see,' said East, 'and there, just behind it, is the place for fights. It's out of the way of the masters, who all live on the other side, and don't come near here after the first lesson, or roll-call. On the other side of the ground is the place where the big matches are played. I say, it's awfully cold, let's have a run across,' and away went East, Tom close behind him. East was trying his best, and Tom, who was proud of his running, began to run as fast as he could. Right across the field they ran, and there wasn't a yard between them when they stopped at the other side.

'I say,' said East, as soon as he could get his breath, 'you're not a bad runner!' Of course this praise pleased Tom, but he did not show his pleasure.

'I say, East, I wish you'd tell me one thing. Why do you wear white trousers in November?' he then asked, for he had seen that almost all the School-house boys were wearing them.

'Why bless us, don't you know? No, I forgot. Why today's the School-house match. Our house plays the whole school at football. And we wear white trousers to show the others that we don't care who kicks us. You are in luck to have come today. You will see a great match, and Brook's going to let me play. That's more than he'll do for any other lower-school boy, except James, and he's fourteen.
